

CARSEBRIDGE 48 YEARS OLD

Single Grain Whisky | 2018 Release

The first release in this series of just 1,000 bottles of this very rare grain whisky from a closed distillery is also the oldest Carsebridge ever bottled. Extraordinary with a unique sophisticated and subtle old single grain taste. Aged in refill American Oak Hogsheads. Limited edition from Diageo Special Releases annual collection.

Tasting notes

Color

Deep gold

Aroma

Delicate, light and balanced aromas of very old grain

Taste

Rich in texture, voluptuous mouth feel and a big, soft, sweet and gently spicy taste.

Finish

Long finish.

Carsebridge Distillery - Closed 1983 Carsebridge sat in the town of Alloa, by the River Forth, as it spills out into the Firth of Forth. This is 20 miles northwest of Edinburgh, on the east coast of Scotland. Founded in 1799, by John Bald & Co. Interestingly it spent its first half-century as a single malt distillery. But they switched to grain distillation due to the rising popularity of blends, and a surge in demand for relatively neutral grain spirits. Sadly, the facility was mothballed before its 84th birthday in 1983. Nothing was maintained, and the facility was abandoned. In 1992, the place was stripped for scrap and the buildings were demolished. Original bottlings from Carsebridge are hard to come by.